Taken to Milwaukee. The promoters of the semi-centennial exposition to be held at Milwaukee, Wis., in 1898 propose to bring to the city at that time all of the Indians located on reservations in the state and have them build wigwams and live on the exposition grounds during the five months the affair will be open. There are at least 2,500 Indians in the state. This number of red men would in itself prove a great drawing card, as it is not believed that so many of them have ever been gathered at one time in a big city.

We have been advised to "drop the subject of silver" and yet our gold standard friends go on organizing clubs, sending out literature, and advocating participation in Democratic primaries. The truth is the cause of bimetallism, so in this (the 25th) Judicial District, far from having been killed at the polls in November last, has been advanced by the attention centered upon it during the campaign, and by the immense number of failures that have occurred since McKinley's election on

The aggregate liabilities of those that suspended in the two months since the election are greater than the aggregate of all that suspended in the months previous. Every one who has had occasion to consult the cumbersome old encyclopædias for some needed information, effectually concealed in some long article, will be glad to know of the appearance of a new general reference work built along different lines, so that any child who can read may successfully consult

Such a work is The New Standard American Encyclopædia in eight large quarto volumes, and which embraces the substance of all the other encyclopædias, besides a very large amount of new up-to-date matter none of them contain. There are over 3,500 illustrations, which cover every conceivable subject, lending new interest to the descriptions, and forming a succession of pleasing surprises. It also ontains over 300 colored maps, charts, and diagrams, and constitutes a complete atlas of the world such as no other ncyclopædia has undertaken to present. This feature will be found of the highest alue in the education of the young, for the pictures and colored maps will have distinct fascination for them, and thus prove an important incentive to reading
